About KAZIMIERZ ŁYSZCZYNSKI

Kazimierz Łyszczyński also known as Casimir Liszinski (1643 - 1689) - Polish philosopher, who was accused, tried and cruelly executed for atheism. In the treatise "De non existentia Dei" he asserted that God, being "a creation of a Man", does not exist and that "Religion was constituted by people without religion" with the aim of oppressing simple people.

Kazimierz Łyszczyński was the most eminent Polish mind of 17th century, a man far ahead of his time. Yet, he is forgotten in Poland and totally unknown abroad. It's a high time to render him a historical justice and let him join the greatest thinkers of his epoch such as Giulio Cesare Vanini or Giordano Bruno.
